

Academic unit:	Sociology and Anthropology
Category of appointment:	Preliminary (Tenure-Track)
Field of specialization:	Sociology
Rank/Position title:	Assistant Professor
Start date:	July 1, 2017
Applications will be reviewed starting:	May 15, 2017 and continue until the position is filled

About the position:

The Department of Sociology and Anthropology invites applications from qualified candidates for a tenure track Assistant Professor position in Sociology. We seek someone who is a specialist in Social Justice and has research expertise, using a social justice approach, in one or more areas, which could include: community-engaged sociology, public sociology, inequality, identity, or political economy.

Qualifications:

Candidates must have a PhD in Sociology or a cognate discipline by the time of appointment. Applicants should have an active research profile, leading to significant peer-reviewed publications, and oriented towards community-engaged research. Applicants should have a demonstrated record of teaching effectiveness.

The applicant will be expected to teach some core courses in our new Social Justice stream and help develop the stream, which emphasizes experiential and community-engaged learning. These courses include a second year Foundations in Social Justice class, third year courses in Social Justice in Action and in Collective Action and Social Movements, and a fourth year course, Community-Engaged Sociology, which involves research and advocacy in partnership with community groups. A background working with community organizations would be considered an asset. The applicant would also be expected to teach graduate courses in their specific field.

The position can begin July 1, 2017, although a later start date is potentially negotiable.

Application instructions:

Applications should include: 1) a letter of application 2) curriculum vitae; 3) a teaching portfolio that contains evidence of teaching effectiveness; 4) two writing samples. Applications should be addressed to the Chair, Aaron Doyle, and sent electronically to aaron.doyle@carleton.ca in one single PDF document by May 15, 2017. The candidate should arrange for three letters of reference to be sent to the same e-mail address.

Please indicate in your application if you are a Canadian citizen or permanent resident of Canada.
